Nannies Incorporated is an agency designed to make childbirth easier on parents by offering the services of maternity nurses and nannies. Zara de Haldevang investigates

Few moments can replace the arrival of your first child. The tremendous responsibility and honour of holding your new baby for the first time is an occasion everyone treasures for the rest of their lives. But for many couples, one arrival often turns into two: a baby and a childcarer.

Established in 1989, Nannies Incorporated is a leading international maternity nurse and nanny agency based in London, Paris and Dubai. As well as offering leading expertise in the placement of professional maternity nurses and nannies worldwide, the agency has a long, impressive record of fulfilling their clients' requirements. Whether new parents need a maternity nurse, a permanent full-time live-in or a daily nanny, professional childcarers from Nannies Incorporated always live up to expectations and deliver the right care for you.

The selection process for choosing maternity nurses and nannies is extremely vigilant, where every applicant is required to reach very high expectations and criteria. Annie Martin, the founder and managing director, takes great pride in the company's ability to provide families with the best maternity nurse or nanny available for your children. This agency takes time to match a family's specific needs, whilst upholding the utmost confidentiality with their clients and always strive to achieve a caring relationship based on trust and support.

As well as conducting personal interviews between potential maternity nurses, nannies and the agency's experienced consultants, there are extensive, thorough checks of identity, previous employment, qualifications, criminal records and references. The agency's main concern is the safety and well being of, not only the clients' children, but their employees as well. The liaison process between clients and employees is thorough and meticulous; the team, consisting of Annie Martin, Jana Valabikova, Ellie Bonnett, Isabelle Campredon de Chambure and Anne Langley-Evans and the support of an administrator, has been praised for their efficiency.

Following the infamous Louise Woodward case in 1997, Nannies Incorporated have been complimented on their competence and were labelled by as "the ones that got it right". Annie impressively claims that over the past 22 years, 95% of her loyal staff and clients were satisfied with the agency.

Every relationship requires work from both sides; issues need to be resolved, grievances aired, privacy respected and every party's needs must be met. There is something extraordinarily professional about this agency; not only do their clients boast highly of their "absolutely excellent" service, their candidates have labelled it as "the best maternity nurse and nanny agency in London."

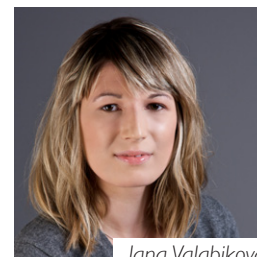

For those skeptical about employing a professional childcarer and letting a stranger into their home, perhaps it is time those qualms should be put aside. Nannies Incorporated portrays everything a business should be: competent, reliable, friendly and professional. Believe me you won't be disappointed.
